Downtown Amarillo

Greetings from Texas! (Howdy, seemed a little over the top.) I am Cindi Bulla, your expert on all things real estate in Amarillo and the Texas panhandle. Why Amarillo? It's the sky. (Think Coldplay background music here) Sky is meant literally and as a metaphor for our locale. The Texas panhandle is a vast plains interrupted only by Palo Duro Canyon (second largest in the US) and a massive horizon from which we enjoy blissful sunrises and fiery sunsets. My specialty is picking up executive and medical transferees from all over the world arriving with their families at our international airport, loading them (some still sobbing) into my almost sporty little Lexus, and convincing them it is not Siberia. And I'm good at it!

Like the sky, the Texas panhandle is both close and far away...from everything. Your office will be just ten minutes from almost anywhere, but in the time it would take for a round trip daily commute in most cities, you can be in any of five states, three cities or a Rocky Mountain ski area. Thanks to real estate contacts throughout the United States, I could live and work almost anywhere, but I choose the Texas panhandle for its history, art, culture, climate, central location and most of all, its people (my grandchildren). Real estate is still affordable, but rising fast. Our urban center is dotted with cranes, excitement and energy. Let me help you catch our (beach free-no sharks) wave!
